

What's next: which parts of open science can grow bigger in the coming years (and how can we help them grow)?

Wednesday, 10 April 2024 13:15 (15 minutes)

Based on the involvement of the speaker in many open-science-centric initiatives, this presentation will give an overview of major open science ecosystems in Europe and beyond with a summary of the areas of open science they cover and develop. That specific analysis and its state-of-the-art summary will become a starting point to predict and define possible next steps that all involved in the open science “movement” can undertake to take open science implementation to the next level.
